

Abstract of the Disclosure

The invention is directed to a method for controlling damping for a bodywork of a vehicle. The bodywork is dampened with a first damping coefficient for a first wheel load. The 5 change of the wheel load is detected and a second damping coefficient is determined based on the change of the wheel load so that the damping remains essentially unchanged after the change of the wheel load.